AAR Award for Best In-Depth Reporting on Religion by Journalists at News Outlets with Circulations Under 100,000. The American Academy of Religion honors best in-depth reporting on topics related to religion (including, but not limited to, religion and politics, popular culture, ethics or bioethics, the courts, schools, science, health, or international or social issues). Affiliated with Emory University, the AAR is the world’s largest association of religion scholars. The AAR neither endorses nor rejects any religious belief or practice. Most judges are current or former journalists. Winner receives $1,000. Entries must be articles, not opinion pieces, published in media with circulations of less than 100,000. Writing for general audiences preferred. The writing must benefit from the work of scholars, though they do not have to be mentioned. Submit five articles on a diversity of topics published during 2009. Entry fee is $25. See Web site for context rules. CONTACT: Susan Snider, AAR, Reporting Award, 825 Houston Mill Rd. NE, Ste. 300, Atlanta, GA 30329-4205; (404) 727-4723; Fax: (404) 727-7959; E-mail: ssnider@aaiweb.org; Web Site: Web Site: www.aaiweb.org/aar. DEADLINE: Feb. 28, 2010.

AAAS Kavli Science Journalism Awards recognize outstanding reporting on science (excluding health and clinical medicine) for a general audience. Entries are judged on clarity of interpretation, originality, scientific accuracy and value in better public understanding of science and its impact. One $5,000 award is given in each of the following categories: general circulation magazines, large newspapers over 100,000 circulation; small newspapers under 100,000 circulation; radio; television; online; and a category open to journalists worldwide, across all news media, recognizing excellence in science news reporting for children. The contest year is July 1 through June 30. CONTACT: Molly McIntyre, Contest Coordinator, American Association for the Advancement of Science, 1200 New York Ave. NW, Washington, DC 20005; (202) 326-6434; Fax: (202) 789-0455; E-mail: mmcminty@aaas.org; Web Site: www.aaas.org. DEADLINE: Aug. 1, 2010.

AAES Engineering Journalism Award recognizes outstanding reporting of an event or issue that furthers public understanding of engineering. The award is given in one of three categories: daily newspapers, general circulation print media, and broadcast radio or television. The prize consists of a plaque. Nomination forms can be found on the Web site. Nominations must also contain a resume or curriculum vitae for the nominee, plus the nominee’s entire article. Should apply through AAES Members Society. Nominations welcome from reporters, editors, publishers, and members of the engineering community. CONTACT: Connie Kyle, Office Manager, American Association of Engineering Societies, 6522 Meadowridge Rd., Ste. 101, Elkridge, MD 21075; (202) 296-2237 ext. 12; Fax: (202) 296-1151; E-mail: cKyle@aaes.org; Web Site: www.aaes.org. DEADLINE: Dec. 31, 2009.

American Institute of Physics Science Writing Awards were designed to promote effective science communication in print and broadcast media in order to improve the general public’s appreciation of physics, astronomy, and allied science fields. “At a time when the news industry is under-going profound and disruptive change, the Knight program has been invaluable in helping media companies change their skills and thinking to prosper in the post-print world. The program combines practical knowledge and strategic thinking – tools and hope – for journalists.”

John Yemma
– Editor, Christian Science Monitor

The Knight Digital Media Center – a partnership of the USC Annenberg School for Communication & Journalism and the UC Berkeley Graduate School of Journalism – offers a spectrum of training programs from a multimedia skills boot camp for digital neophytes to transformational leadership training for top editors. These competitive fellowship programs are supported by funding from the John S. and James L. Knight Foundation.

USC High-impact seminars and leadership conferences

Journalists already working in multimedia environments learn the time-tested best practices that make them consistently effective and accurate. They explore new ways to tell complicated stories about critical issues with digital tools. Leadership conferences guide editors in the most efficient ways to transform their newsrooms for multiplatform, 24/7 publication.

UC Berkeley Multimedia reporting and convergence workshops

An intense “hands-on” boot camp immerses highly skilled traditional journalists into an active digital newsroom environment to learn the newest tools and skills to report and create for multimedia platforms. Introduces reporters and editors to emerging technology and storytelling tools that are needed to reach and be interactive with digital audiences.

The Fellowship is designed to broaden perspectives, nurture intellectual growth, and inspire personal transformation. International travel is an integral part of this; currently excursions include Argentina and Russia. With no deadlines to worry about, you are free to explore the expanse of scholarship available at the University of Michigan. Multi-platform training features a workshop by instructors from the Poynter Institute and a “backpack” of equipment supplied to each Fellow to help tailor new techniques to individual demands. Leading academics and figures of major interest in journalism give seminars and discuss issues. Speakers have included Mike Wallace, Charles Gibson, Seamus Heaney, Michele Norris, Gloria Steinem, Ken Auletta, Michael Moore, Ellen Weiss, Clarence Page, Patrick Oliphant, Anne Garrels, Richard Ford, Brian Tierney, George Soros, Tom Friedman, Jill Abramson, Ira Glass, Bob Mankoff and Paul Tash.

Spouses are an integral part of the Fellowship experience and are invited to participate actively. They often end their year with a book in the works or a new career on the horizon. Housing is easy and the public schools are very good.

Mike and Mary Wallace House, a graceful, spacious home, is a gift from the CBS newsmen and his wife that serves as headquarters.

One application offers consideration for any and all Fellowships available. Full-time journalists in any media with five years experience may apply.

Metcalf Institute and Brown University Superfund Research Program will offer a two-day seminar for career journalists on April 1, 2010, on the Science and Impacts of Toxic Chemicals. With growing public awareness of toxic exposures in the air, water and ground around us, journalists must bridge the gap between science and public perception. But environmental toxicology information can be difficult to translate accurately, leaving news audiences confused and regulators and scientists frustrated. This seminar will feature leading environmental scientists and journalists, with participants visiting research labs and discussing case studies on the communication of biopersistence-A and air quality impacts. The seminar is tuition-free and includes lodging, but travel costs are not included and space is limited. Working journalists from all media with at least five years of professional experience who are reporting in the U.S. may apply. White House Fellowships choose between 11 and 19 individuals each year to work directly with senior White House officials and Cabinet secretaries. The fellowships aim to provide gifted and highly-motivated Americans with first-hand experience in the governing process and a sense of personal involvement in the leadership of society. Fellows also participate in an education program that includes domestic and international travel. Applicants must be U.S. citizens; federal employees may not apply unless they are uniformed military personnel. Applicants should be out of school and working in their chosen profession. The average age of Fellows is 33 years. Fellowship period is Sept. 1, 2009, to Aug. 31, 2010. CONTACT: President’s Commission on White House Fellowships, 1900 E ST NW, Room B431, Washington, DC 20415; (202) 395-4522; Fax: (202) 395-6179; E-mail: info@whitehousefellows.gov; Web Site: www.whitehouse.gov/fellows. Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars Fellowships award 20-25 academic year residential fellowships to scholars and practitioners with outstanding project proposals in the social sciences and humanities on national and/or international issues. Topics should intersect with questions of public policy or provide the historical and/or cultural framework to illumine issues of contemporary importance. Fellowships are awarded at the Wilson Center, where they interact with policymakers and staff working on similar issues. Residence is for the academic year; occasionally fellowships are awarded for shorter periods, four months minimum. Academic applicants are limited to the postdoctoral level, normally with publications beyond their Ph.D. dissertation. For other applicants, an equivalent level of professional achievement is expected. International applications welcomed. The Center tries to ensure Fellows’ stipends, with other funding, approximate their regular salary. Fellowships provide private offices, access to the Library of Congress, personal computers, and part-time research assistants. Travel expenses for Fellows, spouses, and dependents provided.
